Getting it at

Angler's

Angler is an interesting name for an establishment. It makes you think of a place where Anglers congregate, or where anglers meet and talk about fish; the big one that got away and things like that.

Not an avid fishing fan myself; I can never relate to their enthusiasm although seafood is one of my favourite food. And so that is why I am enthusiastic about this particular establishment. It is a restaurant that serves seafood.

Actually named Anglers delight, it is located at Kinarut, twenty minutes drive from Kota Kinabalu, just after the old estate Mansion, just nearby the Outward Bound School. There is a large signboard there so you won't miss it.

My friends and I frequent Anglers for its Tom Yam. This Thai dish served there is commendable. It's hot and sour taste is just right. It is not so hot that you can't enjoy it and it is not too bland either. The Tom Yam seafood is noodles, prawns and squids as well as pieces of fish. There are other foods of course that are just as delicious. Another personal favourite is the mussels. Personally I prefer steamed mussels where it is eaten with sambal or hot chilli paste with lime, but there are other ways to serve mussels. It can be served cooked with chilli and tamarind sauce. Or it can be lightly sautéed and served with oyster sauce. The prawn dish there is also sumptuous. It is so fresh that you can actually feel the pliancy of the flesh within the cooked part. Eat it with chilli and chopped shallots; its just delicious.

The fish is also commendable. It is served; cooked to perfection, a gourmet's delight.

They also serve crabs. As all crab dish go, it is best enjoyed when you use your fingers to scarp the flesh from its shell. Don't miss this dish if you go there. It is one of their specialities.

As for drinks, you have an array of them to choose from. Get the coconut drink though. It is thirst-satisfying and good for your digestive system. Or so I am told.

You don't have to worry about space too. The establishment may look a bit ramshackle from
